Vannarponnai, Jaffna, Sri Lanka

The Centre for Women and Development publishes "Nangai", a monthly bilingual magazine which features current trends and issues on women. The editorials highlight issues related to women or affecting the women's community. The magazine includes articles related to women's issues and problems about their role in development, facts about women workers employed in the Middle Eastern countries, women's health and education, violence against women, rape, sexism, child labor, human rights and rehabilitation for women affected by war situations. Short stories and poems by women and about women are also featured.

The centre welcomes contributions to the magazine in English. Articles, stories, poems, news, etc. must be related to women's issues and concerns.

Centre for Women Studies

P.O. Box 1492
Amman, Jordan
Tel. 847 200

This is a newly instituted non-governmental organization founded by a group of professional women who are concerned about women's issues. They aim to develop communication lines and links with other feminist organizations for future cooperation and support.

The philosophy of the center is tied to the aspirations of the Arab Nation in its quest for freedom, independence, unity, justice and development. At the same time, they acknowledge the fact that women's issues are not localized in the Arab world but have a global dimension that should be addressed by women themselves in order to create unified strategies.

The centre perceives the need to liberate women so that they become active participants in future development of society on economic, political, intellectual and scien-

Rural Communes

70, 2nd Floor
1st Marine Street,
Bombay 400 002 India
Tel.: 295601

Rural Communes is a voluntary organization engaged in rural development activities in the states of Maharashtra, Gujarat and Madhya Pradesh in India. It has been largely involved in training and organizing rural youth, in the implementation of programmes aimed at the socio-economic empowerment of the rural poor, and in networking with other agencies working in related areas.

At present the organization is involved in interacting with and organizing women as a separate and independent category, with plans to implement programmes for their socio-economic empowerment. It also functions as a resource center for selected topics and plans to expand the scope to include ideas, information and issues related to women's development, which will in turn be disseminated to other agencies.

Rural Communes is interested in receiving relevant publications (in English), as well as information or experiences pertaining to women's organizing and socio-economic development issues specific to women.

tific levels. Some of the activities the centre is involved in are the following:

preparing studies, research and lectures on women, and the publication of these issues;

organizing and/or participation in conferences on women's issues;

establishing and strengthening scientific and cultural contacts with societies and institutions that have similar activities;

extending our expertise and aid to individuals and establishments that are specializing in women's studies, and establishing a resource library on women's issues comprised of written and audiovisual materials.

AWARE

64A Race Course Road
Singapore 0821
Tel.: 293 - 5868

Aware is a women's center in Singapore that has a telephone service, Helpline, to assist troubled women, especially women who are having difficulty with marriage or divorce, or those who are victims of rape or domestic violence.

Volunteers are thoroughly trained in listening and counselling techniques and are coached on the types of social services and legal remedies that are available to women. Helpline's philosophy is not to tell women what to do but rather to enable them to decide for themselves what they can do to improve their life situations.

The Aware Helpline telephone number is 293-1011. Volunteers can be reached from 4 p.m. - 10 p.m., Mondays through Fridays.

Last March 8, 1991 Aware opened a women's center, after four years of brainstorming and planning. Aside from the Helpline service room, the center also houses a library with a collection of women's newsletters, books on women and by women, and a collection of feminist children's books. A comfortable lounge area with audio-visual facilities and a bright kitchen are added attractions of the center.

Rape Crisis Centre

40 Woodford St. Newtown,
Port of Spain, Trinidad, W.I.
Tel.: 622 7273

The Rape Crisis Centre of Trinidad and Tobago is a non-governmental organization which provides counselling to survivors of sexual and physical abuse. Its activities also include a public education programme, training and lobbying for the legislation of women's rights, and the protection of women against violence.

The organization has been in operation since 1984. It started from a small committee of concerned persons and has grown into a full time service organization with one branch office to date. As the organization expands the need to formalize its structure and to develop its own policies became more and more apparent. The Rape Crisis Centre will be grateful if other women's organizations could share information and experiences on organizational policies to help them as they strive to make their organization stronger and more effective.

- 1) to strengthen the commitment among women to be more active in promoting social values such as justice, peace, development and others.
- 2) to promote the involvement of people in decision making processes.
- 3) to encourage and assist women in finding ways to improve their standard of living.
- 4) to increase public awareness of issues and problems affecting women and children in rural communities.
- 5) to keep members informed about women in development issues.
- 6) to make women aware of the importance of working with an umbrella organization to be effective in making changes.

Its five areas of interest are: food and agriculture; education and development; health, nutrition and sanitation; income generation activities; and charity.

Hong Kong Association of Women Workers

The Hong Kong Association of Women Workers (HKAWW) is an organization concerned with women workers' issues which aims to fight for the rights of women workers and build solidarity among them.

The HKAWW was inaugurated in March 1989. Its members are factory workers, social workers and union activists. It has published a research report on outworkers and made known to the public the situation of the marginal group that contributed to the manufacturing industries of Hong Kong. It has worked towards more child care services. It has participated in the discussion of the future political structure of Hong Kong so that women's voices can be heard by policy-makers. It also offers counselling services on family problems and labor laws.

This year, it has education programs to raise women workers' consciousness on their own rights on labor law, marriage, family and society. It is compiling a handbook on the rights of women workers.

It is collecting and organizing information on women, including work, child care and career.

Hong Kong Women Christian Council

The Hong Kong Women Christian Council (HKWCC) is composed of a group of women Christians, with strong initiative, who are interested in looking into womanist theology vigorously and systematically. It is active and energetic in participating in social affairs and fighting for women's rights. To advocate womanist theology, the HKWCC holds courses, talks, seminars and publishes "Release". It is not bound to the church and it has cooperated actively with other women's groups to fight for sexual equality. They included issues such as separate tax assessment, child care, right to free assembly and the democratization of the political structure of Hong Kong.

Its plans include:

1. To motivate the development, sharing and introspection of feminist theology.
2. To contribute to the democratic movement of Hong Kong.
3. To liaise with other women's groups.
4. To raise concern on the issue of sexual discrimination and to promote the ideas of women emancipation and sexual equality in the church.
